- The chance to sing a wide variety of repertoire
- Development of aural, musicianship and notation reading skills, helping some of our boys to win music scholarships and choristerships in college or cathedral choirs
- A lively alternative to the church music tradition, especially for older boys interested in singing

Saturday morning rehearsals during school terms with director Rory McCleery

Rory McCleery began his musical career as a chorister at St Mary's Episcopal Cathedral, Edinburgh and gained a double first in music at Oxford University. He greatly enjoys working as a countertenor soloist and consort singer with professional vocal ensembles including The Sixteen and The Monteverdi Choir. He is also the founder and musical director of The Marian Consort, with whom he performs across the UK and Europe and appears regularly on BBC Radio 3. Rory is in demand as a guest conductor, chorus master, singing teacher and workshop leader, and is a passionate believer in the importance of music education and singing for young people.
